In this screencast we will cover how to change the citation style. When you first start inserting citations into a Word document, you are asked to choose a citation style. If you later determine that you want to use a different citation style, you can make this change by using the “set doc prefs” icon. Click this icon and select a new style from the menu. The change will automatically be reflected in your Word document. To learn how to add more citations to your menu of choices, go to the Adding Citation Styles screencasts in the Advanced Zotero tutorial.
