DEMOCRATIC CRISIS.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

We are informed that Mr. Lincoln, the head of the Democratic party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Lincoln, in which he expresses his satisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on the same ticket as before.

We are also informed that Mr. Davis, the head of the Republican party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Davis, in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on a different ticket.

We are further informed that Mr. Johnson, the head of the Whig party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Johnson, in which he expresses his satisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on the same ticket as before.

We are also informed that Mr. Fillmore, the head of the Free Soil party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Fillmore, in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on a different ticket.

We are further informed that Mr. Taylor, the head of the Know-Nothing party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Taylor, in which he expresses his satisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on the same ticket as before.

We are also informed that Mr. Douglas, the head of the American party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Douglas, in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on a different ticket.

We are further informed that Mr. Pierce, the head of the Liberal Democrat party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Pierce, in which he expresses his satisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on the same ticket as before.

We are also informed that Mr. Chase, the head of the National party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Chase, in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on a different ticket.

We are further informed that Mr. Fillmore, the head of the Democratic party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Fillmore, in which he expresses his satisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on the same ticket as before.

We are also informed that Mr. Taylor, the head of the Republican party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Taylor, in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on a different ticket.

We are further informed that Mr. Pierce, the head of the Know-Nothing party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Pierce, in which he expresses his satisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on the same ticket as before.

We are also informed that Mr. Chase, the head of the Whig party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Chase, in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on a different ticket.

We are further informed that Mr. Douglas, the head of the Free Soil party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Douglas, in which he expresses his satisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on the same ticket as before.

We are also informed that Mr. Johnson, the head of the American party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Johnson, in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on a different ticket.

We are further informed that Mr. Fillmore, the head of the Liberal Democrat party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Fillmore, in which he expresses his satisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on the same ticket as before.

We are also informed that Mr. Taylor, the head of the National party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Taylor, in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on a different ticket.

We are further informed that Mr. Pierce, the head of the Democratic party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Pierce, in which he expresses his satisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on the same ticket as before.

We are also informed that Mr. Fillmore, the head of the Republican party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Fillmore, in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on a different ticket.

We are further informed that Mr. Taylor, the head of the Know-Nothing party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Taylor, in which he expresses his satisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on the same ticket as before.

We are also informed that Mr. Pierce, the head of the Whig party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Pierce, in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on a different ticket.

We are further informed that Mr. Chase, the head of the Free Soil party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Chase, in which he expresses his satisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on the same ticket as before.

We are also informed that Mr. Johnson, the head of the American party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Johnson, in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on a different ticket.

We are further informed that Mr. Fillmore, the head of the Liberal Democrat party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Fillmore, in which he expresses his satisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on the same ticket as before.

We are also informed that Mr. Taylor, the head of the National party, is to be re-elected as President of the United States. This information is accompanied with a letter from Mr. Taylor, in which he expresses his dissatisfaction with the present state of the Union, and his determination to carry the next election on a different ticket.