THEOREGON WEEKLY UNION.

Vol. 1.

CORVALLIS, OREGON, SATURDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 21, 1866.

No. 23.

A LOOK OUT IN THE FUTURE.

Mr. J. H. Blater, former school principal in the town of Corvallis, has recently returned from a trip to the east, where he has visited all the large cities and met many of the prominent educators of the country. He brings with him fresh and valuable ideas, which he plans to apply to the improvement of our schools. He has been particularly interested in the work of the Bureau of Education, and has had the opportunity to study the methods of teaching in the best schools of the country. He is well equipped to give us valuable advice on the subject, and we look forward to his return with much interest.

President Lincoln.

Mr. Lincoln's life was short, but his influence on the world has been profound. His administration was marked by great courage and wisdom, and his legacy to the nation is one of hope and progress. As a statesman, he was a man of vision, and his policies helped to shape the course of American history. He was a man of great compassion and understanding, who worked tirelessly to bring about social and economic reform. His death was a tragic loss, but his legacy lives on in the hearts of all who strive for justice and equality.

The Oregon Constitution.

The Oregon Constitution is a document that has shaped the history of the state. It was adopted in 1857 and has undergone several amendments since then. The Constitution provides for a bicameral legislature and a judiciary system. It also guarantees certain fundamental rights to its citizens, such as freedom of speech and religion. The Constitution is a cornerstone of our democracy, and it continues to guide the state in its operations.

The Oregon Weekly Union is committed to serving the community by providing accurate and timely news. We strive to present a balanced and fair perspective on all issues, and we encourage open and respectful dialogue among our readers. We appreciate your support and look forward to serving you in the future.
The Union.

December 31, 1861.

To the Senators: We have this evening the honor to present the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That the Senators collectively request their colleagues in the Senate to make a special message to the Governor, stating the important considerations relating to the Oregon Donation, and the rights of the communities entitled to the benefits thereof."

The resolution was adopted.

Arrival of the Northern Belle.

Elden Old main, where passengers were transferred to the Central Pacific, and went to Portland, Oregon, via St. Louis, Missouri, and Kansas City, Missouri.

Boise, Nov. 17.—Worthington arrived in Portland at 3:30 o'clock today, and is now en route for the north. The mail for Seattle and Portland and the return mail for the south were conveyed by the train.

General Wright, of the United States Army, Inspector of military posts, arrived on the express train for the north and south, and is now on his way to Washington, D.C., for the purpose of looking into the condition of the military posts in the Pacific Northwest.

Mr. Carson.—It is reported that Mr. Carson is preparing to return to California. He is expected to depart by the Northern Belle.

The Northern Belle is the last of the three trains that leave for the north, and contains all the passengers, including the mail, that are on board. The trains are ready for their journey.

An Agricultural Society has been formed in the city of Portland, and the members are now preparing for the annual fair to be held in September. The fair will be held on the land owned by the society, and will consist of exhibits of agricultural products, including fruits, vegetables, and grains.

A large crowd of people was present at the opening of the fair, and the exhibits were eagerly viewed by the spectators. The fair was a great success, and the members of the society are now planning for the next year's fair, which will be held in September.
The context of the document includes a discussion of the political and legal implications of the 1850 Fugitive Slave Act. It argues against the act, emphasizing the injustice and the potential for further violence and conflict. The text is rich in historical and political analysis, discussing the implications of the act on the Union and the states, particularly the northern and southern views on slavery and freedom.

NEWSPAPER MILLING NEVADA SILVER.

Our correspondent in Nevada reports that the changes in the value of silver has rather a novel and not altogether good effect on the habit of drinking, a saloon and its drinking and smoking paraphernalia, the old corner of the Union. The barman, instead of a bottle of alcohol, has a keg of Nevada silver, which he offers to the customer as a substitute. If they merely tasted the Nevada silver, they would find it a beverage of much finer quality than alcohol, with less of the 'aftertaste' and more of the 'uplifting' qualities. However, if they merely tasted the Nevada silver, they would not find it as good for them as alcohol, with less of the 'aftertaste' and more of the 'uplifting' qualities. It is worth mentioning that the Nevada silver is made from the Nevada silver, which is mined in Nevada, a state of the United States.

Newsmen have had a change in their habits since the Nevada silver was introduced. They no longer drink alcohol, but now drink Nevada silver, which is much more healthy and refreshing. It is good for their health and helps them to stay sober.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 13.

The Union has been changed in style. The newspaper is now printed in a new font, which is much more readable and easier on the eyes. The news is also arranged in a new way, with more space between articles and headlines. The editors have also added more features, such as a sports section and a weather report.

The market is still in a state of flux. The prices of silver have dropped, and this is reflected in the prices of goods. The farmers are not happy with the situation, and they are calling for a return to the gold standard.

The weather is still cold, but the sun is shining. People are enjoying the outdoor activities, such as skiing and snowboarding. The ski resorts are doing well, and the hotels are filled with visitors. The weather is expected to remain cold for the next few weeks, but there is no sign of snow on the horizon.

The news from abroad is still uncertain. The war in Europe is still ongoing, and the peace talks are not making much progress. The United States is taking a neutral stance, but many people are calling for intervention. The government is under pressure to take action, but it is not clear what the next move will be.

The stock market is volatile, with many investors unsure of what to do. The banks are offering special rates, and people are taking advantage of them. The government is also expected to announce a new stimulus package, which is expected to boost the economy.

The news from the business world is good. Companies are reporting strong profits, and the economy is expected to continue to grow. The unemployment rate is low, and people are confident about the future.

The news from the courts is mixed. Some cases are being decided in favor of the plaintiffs, while others are going in favor of the defendants. The judges are working hard, and the courts are functioning efficiently.

The news from the world of sports is exciting. The teams are playing well, and the fans are enjoying the games. The games are being televised, and people all over the world are tuning in.

The news from the world of politics is still uncertain. The politicians are wrangling over the budget, and the government is expected to announce a new spending plan soon. The elections are coming up, and people are speculating about the outcome.

The news from the world of science is impressive. The scientists are making new discoveries, and the world is learning more about the universe. The technology is advancing, and people are living in a world of wonders.

The news from the world of entertainment is exciting. The movies are doing well, and the music is catchy. The books are getting good reviews, and the authors are being praised.

The news from the world of nature is fascinating. The animals are living their lives, and the plants are growing. The weather is changing, and the seasons are coming and going. The world is a beautiful place, and we are all its custodians.
