THE OREGON WEEKLY UNION.

The Oregon Weekly Union.

Vol. 3.

Corvallis, Oregon, Tuesday Morning, May 6, 1860.

No. 16.

What is Democracy?

We take the following from the Democratic National Convention report of 1856:

"The Democratic party of Oregon is the party of the people. It is the party of the sectional minorities. It is the party of the small farmer. It is the party of the artisan and the laborer. It is the party of the mechanic and the manufacturer. It is the party of the miller and the baker. It is the party of the laboring man, and it is his party that we must be."
The Oregon Weekly Union.

VOL. 2.

CORVALLIS, OREGON, TUESDAY MORNING, MAY 13, 1869.

NO. 14.

THE OREGON WEEKLY UNION.

DINE.

Dear Editor:—Since my last letter of importance has been the subject of recent public attention, it is only fitting that I should give a brief account of the proceedings of the legislature, which is going on through its sessions, a period of three years. The Senate has been in session for several months, and has passed a number of bills, including several relating to education, public welfare, and the like. The House of Representatives has also been in session, and has passed a number of bills, including several relating to education, public welfare, and the like. The bills passed by the Senate include:

1. A bill for the relief of the poor, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the relief of the poor in the form of food, clothing, and shelter, and is designed to prevent the suffering of the poor in this time of scarcity.

2. A bill for the improvement of the public schools, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the improvement of the public schools, which are in a state of declension, and is designed to provide better education for the children of the state.

3. A bill for the protection of the poor, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the protection of the poor, who are often victimized by the rich and powerful, and is designed to prevent the exploitation of the poor.

4. A bill for the relief of the poor, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the relief of the poor in the form of money, and is designed to provide better living conditions for the poor.

5. A bill for the improvement of the public schools, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the improvement of the public schools, which are in a state of declension, and is designed to provide better education for the children of the state.

6. A bill for the protection of the poor, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the protection of the poor, who are often victimized by the rich and powerful, and is designed to prevent the exploitation of the poor.

7. A bill for the relief of the poor, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the relief of the poor in the form of money, and is designed to provide better living conditions for the poor.

8. A bill for the improvement of the public schools, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the improvement of the public schools, which are in a state of declension, and is designed to provide better education for the children of the state.

9. A bill for the protection of the poor, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the protection of the poor, who are often victimized by the rich and powerful, and is designed to prevent the exploitation of the poor.

The above bills are now before the House of Representatives, and it is expected that they will be passed by the House and signed by the Governor.

Yours truly,

A. B. Dine.

Rector & Editor.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Dear Sir:—Since my last letter of importance has been the subject of recent public attention, it is only fitting that I should give a brief account of the proceedings of the legislature, which is going on through its sessions, a period of three years. The Senate has been in session for several months, and has passed a number of bills, including several relating to education, public welfare, and the like. The House of Representatives has also been in session, and has passed a number of bills, including several relating to education, public welfare, and the like. The bills passed by the Senate include:

1. A bill for the relief of the poor, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the relief of the poor in the form of food, clothing, and shelter, and is designed to prevent the suffering of the poor in this time of scarcity.

2. A bill for the improvement of the public schools, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the improvement of the public schools, which are in a state of declension, and is designed to provide better education for the children of the state.

3. A bill for the protection of the poor, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the protection of the poor, who are often victimized by the rich and powerful, and is designed to prevent the exploitation of the poor.

4. A bill for the relief of the poor, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the relief of the poor in the form of money, and is designed to provide better living conditions for the poor.

5. A bill for the improvement of the public schools, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the improvement of the public schools, which are in a state of declension, and is designed to provide better education for the children of the state.

6. A bill for the protection of the poor, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the protection of the poor, who are often victimized by the rich and powerful, and is designed to prevent the exploitation of the poor.

7. A bill for the relief of the poor, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the relief of the poor in the form of money, and is designed to provide better living conditions for the poor.

8. A bill for the improvement of the public schools, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the improvement of the public schools, which are in a state of declension, and is designed to provide better education for the children of the state.

9. A bill for the protection of the poor, which has been passed by the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. This bill provides for the protection of the poor, who are often victimized by the rich and powerful, and is designed to prevent the exploitation of the poor.

The above bills are now before the House of Representatives, and it is expected that they will be passed by the House and signed by the Governor.

Yours truly,

A. B. Dine.

Rector & Editor.
ARRIVAL OF THE PANAMA.

The steamer Puget, arrived at Puget, last Sunday, from Panama, with 253 passengers, 325 cattle, and 100 horses, having sailed from Panama on the 13th ultimo.

The steamer, Captain Dyer, has been engaged by the Panama of the United States. She left Panama on the 13th ultimo, having been engaged by the Panama of the United States. She left Panama on the 13th ultimo, having been engaged by the Panama of the United States.

The steamer, Captain Dyer, has been engaged by the Panama of the United States. She left Panama on the 13th ultimo, having been engaged by the Panama of the United States.