Pat Malone, former fire shorthand reporter.
Our Constitution.

Today we have the head of the Federal government at the residence of President of the U.S. Let us be on President's Day. It is a day of thanksgiving for the blessings of the President of the U.S., and of the Constitution of the U.S., and the United States of America.

The Constitution of the United States was adopted on September 17, 1787, by the Constitutional Convention of the States. It is the supreme law of the land and the framework for the Federal government of the United States.

The Constitution is divided into seven articles, each covering a different aspect of the government. The first article establishes the national government, including the executive, legislative, and judicial branches. The second article deals with the election and qualifications of the President, Vice President, and Members of Congress. The third article provides for the enumeration of the population, and the fourth article deals with the establishment of a uniform system of weights and measures.

The fifth article authorizes Congress to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to borrow money on the credit of the United States, and to guarantee the payment of public debts. The sixth article provides for the appointment of all civil officers, including the President, Vice President, and Members of Congress.

The seventh article provides for the amendment of the Constitution, and the eighth article concerns the judicial branch of the government. The ninth article provides for the ratification of the Constitution by the states, and the tenth article concerns the vesting of the executive power in the President. The eleventh article provides for the establishment of a national bankruptcy court, and the twelfth article deals with the election of the President in cases of a tie in the Electoral College.

The Constitution is the focal point of the Federal government, and it is the foundation upon which the United States of America was established. It is a document that has stood the test of time, and it has been a source of inspiration for many nations around the world.

The Constitution can be divided into two parts: the Preamble and the Body. The Preamble is a declaration of the purpose of the Constitution, and the Body contains the specific provisions that govern the government of the United States. The Constitution is a living document, and it is constantly evolving to meet the needs of the American people.

The Constitution is a masterpiece of American history, and it is a testament to the wisdom and foresight of the Founding Fathers. It is a document that has stood the test of time, and it has been a source of inspiration for many nations around the world.

The Constitution is the focal point of the Federal government, and it is the foundation upon which the United States of America was established. It is a document that has stood the test of time, and it has been a source of inspiration for many nations around the world.

The Constitution can be divided into two parts: the Preamble and the Body. The Preamble is a declaration of the purpose of the Constitution, and the Body contains the specific provisions that govern the government of the United States. The Constitution is a living document, and it is constantly evolving to meet the needs of the American people.

The Constitution is a masterpiece of American history, and it is a testament to the wisdom and foresight of the Founding Fathers. It is a document that has stood the test of time, and it has been a source of inspiration for many nations around the world.